

OUR DAILY MAIL

SUNDAY BALL PLAYING.

Editor Public Ledger: When the town of Chester became a part of the City of Maysville, it was universally believed she must conform to the laws governing the city, and that the Sixth Ward would be entitled to the same protection as any other Ward in the city. When Chester had a government of her own there existed a law making ball playing on Sunday punishable by a fine. Yesterday there were a number of men and boys, who, forgetful of the commandments, and not realizing there are six other days in the week, enjoyed the afternoon by engaging in a game, much to the annoyance of law abiding citizens in the immediate vicinity; and as the ball season approaches it is to be hoped the police will take steps to abolish Sunday games. ODDER.

ARTHUR L., son of Dr. John A. Michell of this city, died at Louisville Saturday.

ALFRED FRUSTOE, aged 81, a gardener living just out of town, is in a precarious condition, due to old age.

Was Afraid to Ask Papa.

An elopement that will cause much surprise in Frankfort was ended Saturday evening by the marriage, in Jeffersonville, Ind., of Pythian Saffell and Miss Frances Taylor. Both are young people of high social standing. Mr. Saffell is a son of Postmaster Saffell, and Miss Taylor is the daughter of E. H. Taylor, ex-Mayor, and at present member of the Legislature from Franklin county. The young people have been sweethearts for some time, and no serious objections were interposed. Rather than ask Mr. Taylor for his daughter's hand, fearing a refusal, Mr. Saffell concluded to elope. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Saffell returned to Louisville and registered at the Willard where, after remaining a day or so, they will return to Frankfort.

The Governor Won't Interfere.

The Governor has declined to interfere in behalf of C. C. Moore, the editor of The Bluegrass Blade, convicted of criminal libel and sentenced to sixty days' imprisonment in the County Jail at Paris. Governor Brown has made the following response to the petition of about twenty citizens of Georgetown, asking that he grant Moore a pardon:

Many good citizens of Scott county ask Executive interference in this case, tried before the County Judge and a jury of Bourbon. If errors of law were committed to the prejudice of the substantial rights of the defendant, a plain, legal remedy was and is available. His offense was a terrible accusation in his newspaper against the Paris Christian Church, a large body composed of as reputable manhood and womanhood as any in the United States. Regarding his conduct as inexcusable, I decline to interpose.

KENTUCKY'S SAMPLE MOSSBACKS

The Thirty-five Skinflint Stinkers Who Endeavored to Disgrace the State.

Thirty-five members of the Kentucky House of Representatives hand their names down to posterity as opposed to any representation of their state at the great World's Fair at Chicago. These gentlemen, says The Louisville Times, almost without exception, opposed the appropriation because they "thought it wrong to take the people's money for such a purpose." It is for that reason interesting to note that the counties represented by these thirty-five mossbacks draw out of the State Treasury every year $135,327 more than they pay into it. The gentlemen who voted for the bill represent counties that pay $769,521 of the total $810,288 of the net revenue of the state. The thirty-five mossbacks represent only five net revenue paying districts. The counties that carry the burden of state taxation favored the expenditure; the counties that leave the burden to others are the ones that howl loudest about spending the people's money. It may comfort them to know that not a dollar of theirs will be spent on the state's exhibit at Chicago, and if they are as observant as they ought to be, they would see some significance in the fact that the counties which are progressive enough to want this exhibit, have become wealthy enough to carry, not only their own burdens, but also those of their less progressive neighbors.

Here is the list of the record-makers and mossbacks who voted against the bill in nearly every shape possible:

SOCIETY IN THE GULCH.

Jim Couldn't Go Because He Was Short on Ornaments.

There was to be a dance in the gulch that night, and all her beauty and her chivalry were to be on hand, says New York Truth. Upon the mountain side a light flickered from the window of Dandy Jim's cabin. The revelers observed it as they went in groups to the ball and wondered. Jim was usually the very first at all festive occasions and the last to leave. An hour after the latest arrivals had made their appearance Jim had not come.

Wonder gave place to alarm then and a committee of three was appointed to go to Jim's cabin and investigate.

The light from the window streamed down the path and the visitors found no difficulty in reaching the cabin though the night was dark.

In response to their knock they were invited to enter, and within they found Dandy Jim seated in the corner in the deepest dejection.

"Hello! Jim," greeted the spokesman, cheerily, "why ain't yer at the shindig?"

"Can't, boys. I can't come," and Jim's lips quivered.

"What's the row? Got news from the east? Is yer mother dead or yer wife livin'?" We've been sent up to find out."

"Wusn't that, boys. I ain't got nuthin' to wear. Both my revolvers is sich danged bad form, beside bein' awfward to dance in."

Jim hastily brushed his eyes and the visitors looked mournfully at each other.

They knew that on such a night there were no spare garments in the gulch that would fit Dandy Jim.

JAPANESE COURTESY.

Often It Is Manifested Under Serious Disadvantage.

Every act in Japan is performed with courtesy and consideration for others. Even the administration of justice is a stately ceremonial compared with the haste and harshness so common in more civilized countries. Henry Norman says, in the Real Japan, that no policeman in that country is ever known to smile, and when he finds it necessary to arrest a law-breaker, his face becomes clouded by an absolute pall of sorrow and solemnity.

Grasping the offender firmly with one hand, with the other he extracts from an invisible pocket of great capacity a roll of strong cord. Whispering minute and polite directions in the ear of the victim, who obeys them with scrupulous consideration for the feelings of his captor, he winds the cord several times about the man's waist and then attaches his wrists to the small of the back.

Six feet of cord remain. The policeman grasps the loose end, and bowing to the prisoner with an "After you, sir," the pair march away in a touching union of sadness and security.

The neighborhood is paralyzed during the performance, business is suspended, traffic is stopped, but the moment the polite policeman and his prisoner have disappeared round the corner, all the spectators burst simultaneously into laughter, and two minutes afterward the affair is forgotten.

IN HARD LUCK.

The Unfortunate Condition of a Scion of Royalty.

A shivering wretch, with barely clothes enough to dust a fiddle with, entered the Chestnut street police station with the wintry blast one night, says the St. Louis Chronicle, and applied for shelter. There was a good-natured expression that dirt could not hide on the poor fellow's face. The sergeant looked at him a moment, and then reflected:

"I never in my life saw a man so badly pockmarked." Then he said to the man at the railing: "You must have fallen into a keg of nails when you were young and your flesh was tender."

"It's my face you mean, sir? Indade I did not, but I'll tell you how it was. I was the first-born in me family, and me father was the wealthiest man in Ireland. Not satisfied with me native beauty, me father had me face set all over with diamonds, rubies and precious stones. When I was ten years of age me father lost his fortune in an effort to free Ireland, and was compelled from toime to toime to remove the jewels from me face to pay the living expenses, and to-day sorrow is the one lift upon me, except a carbuncle on me neck." The sergeant called the turnkey and dryly said: "This man can sleep here to-night."

The Rooster's Flap.

William Hamilton Gibson, who is a trained observer of plants and animals, satisfied himself some time ago that a rooster makes the flapping noise that accompanies his crowing by striking his wings together over his back. The popular notion is that the bird produces the noise by striking his wings against his hard, fat thighs. Mr. Gibson discussed the subject with a farmer once, and the latter laughed at the artist's idea and said: "I've been brought up among the chickens, and I guess I know how a rooster flaps his wings." "Very good," said Mr. Gibson, "but just watch your own fowls for a week, and tell me what you think then." The scornful farmer promised, and returned at the end of the week with the humble confession that Mr. Gibson was right.

A Queer Bird.

The elster is a bird that is respected and feared throughout South Germany. It belongs to the raven tribe, and is about the size of a dove, with black and white feathers and long pointed tail. It builds its nest in orchards and its life is sacred. If it is seen three times in succession on the same house-top in a place remote from its home it is believed to be a sure sign of death in that house. If it flies over a house where anyone is ill and gives its peculiar cry the sick person is sure to die, but if it does not scream the patient may recover.
